The Blocker-Klotz Farm located at ¹⁸15429 National Pike, is an Italianate, cross-gable, frame house with a stone foundation constructed in the mid-19th century. The details of this house include clapboard siding, brackets, and scroll-work balusters on the front porch. The windows are two-over-two, double hung, wood sash. In 1903 J.S and Miriam Broadwater bought the farm from Charles Frost. By 1971 the property was deeded to Sally Ann Williams, Sara Blocher and William Klotz from Laura Klotz and William Turner. William Turner is listed as the father of Sally Ann, Sara and William. Karl and Donna Shulte, who bought the property in 1995, currently own the home. In the October 9, 1930 obituary of Mrs. Mariam Frost Broadwater, it stated the Mrs. Broadwater married James S. Broadwater in Shades Mill. There home was known for its hospitality. The property does appear to be eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places as part of a larger context due to the association with the National Road and the contribution the road has made to our history.

Blocher-Klotz Farm
G-I-A-004
Grantsville, Garrett County, MD
Constructed circa 1908
Private

The Blocher-Klotz Farm, located at 15418 National Pike, is situated on a gently sloping hillside between two major roadways: US Highway 68 and National Pike. The Italianate, cross-gable, frame principal dwelling has a stone foundation and was constructed circa 1908. The symmetrical five-bay, L-plan house has two stories, a full cellar and an attic level. There is a small rear lean-to at the basement level. The windows are two-over-two, double-hung, wood sash with plain wood trim. All the windows retain their original interior shutters. The centrally placed door is a paneled wood door with a six light opening with storm door. There is a single, double-hung, round arch window in each gable. The three center bays on the first story of this façade are sheltered by a hip-roofed porch which is supported by four square columns and two pilasters. Large, ornately scrolled, decorative brackets embellish each support.

The Blocher-Klotz Farm, constructed circa 1908, is historically significant under Criteria A and C of the National Register of Historic Places. Contextually, the farm relates to the development of farmsteads along the National Road. The house meets National Register Criterion C in the area of Architecture as one of the best residential examples of the Italianate style in the county. The property does not appear to meet the National Register Criteria B or D.

Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Blocker-Klotz Farm, located at 15418 National Pike, is situated on a gently sloping hillside between two major roadways: US Highway 68 and National Pike. The Italianate, cross-gable, frame principal dwelling has a stone foundation and was constructed circa 1908. The symmetrical five-bay, L-plan house has two stories, a full cellar and an attic level. There is a small rear lean-to at the basement level.

The main façade has four windows that are two-over-two, double-hung, wood sash with plain wood trim on the first story and five windows of this type on the second story. All the windows retain their original interior shutters. The centrally placed door is a paneled wood door with a six light opening and a storm door. There is a single, double-hung, round arch window in the gable. The three center bays on the first story of this façade are sheltered by a hip-roofed porch which is supported by four square columns and two pilasters. Large, ornately scrolled, decorative brackets embellish each support.

The west and east façades each have four two-over-two, double-hung, wood sash windows. There is a single, double-hung, round arch window in each gable, through which the gable-end, internal brick chimneys are visible. The cellar level features two, four-light casement windows.

The rear ell projects from the south façade and measure two bays long by one bay wide. The east façade of the ell features four, two-over-two, double-hung, wood sash windows. The west façade of the ell has three one-over-one, double-hung, modern sash windows, two, small plate-glass windows, and a wood paneled door. The south façade of the ell has no openings, but features a shed-roof lean-to. Two small door entries for the cellar are present, one on the south façade of the main block and one on the east façade of the ell.

The interior of the Blocher-Klotz Farm is arranged around a central hall. The first floor features a living room, dining room, a bathroom, and kitchen. The second story features four bedrooms and a bathroom. The bathrooms on the first and second story were both added in the 1940s. Each of the interior doors retains the working transoms. See the floor plan sketch submitted with this inventory.

Outbuildings on the property include a double-privy outhouse and shed, a servant's quarters that now serves as a springhouse, and a modern commercial structure.

Prepare a one-paragraph summary statement of significance addressing applicable criteria, followed by a narrative discussion of the history of the resource and its context. (For compliance projects, complete evaluation on a DOE Form – see manual.)

The Blocher-Klotz Farm, constructed circa 1908, is historically significant under Criteria A and C of the National Register of Historic Places. Contextually, the farm relates to the development of farmsteads along the National Road. The house meets National Register Criterion C in the area of Architecture as one of the best residential examples of the Italianate style in the county. The property does not appear to meet the National Register Criteria B or D.

Early European Settlement of Garrett County was little more than the forging of a new frontier. Spurred by the establishment of the Ohio Company of Virginia, permanent settlements on the land consisted predominantly of log structures, none of which survive. (Ware 1991) The thin soil covering the region and the short growing season encouraged an agricultural base in Garrett County of primarily dairy and livestock. The Industrial Revolution was brought to Garrett County in the nineteenth century by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. Coal and timber companies came in search of raw materials for fuel. (Schlosnagle 1978) By the late nineteenth and early twentieth century an increase of sawmills operating in the area promoted the construction of balloon-frame and vertical plank buildings as replacements for the early log structures. (Ware 1991)

The emergence of transportation routes contributed to the area's history. Braddock's Road, the route Major General Edward Braddock followed on his way to Fort Duquesne in 1755, was established along the trail taken by George Washington the previous year to Fort Necessity. Later developed for the National Road, the route was established by the U.S. Congress in 1806 as the nation's first interstate highway and "would link the eastern seaboard with the western interior" (Marriott 1995). By the 1920s the National Road became US Highway 40: a chief transcontinental highway stretching to San Francisco, California. In 1976 the National Road was designated as a National Historic Civil Engineering Landmark. The National Road carried people and consumer goods west from such eastern cities as Philadelphia and Baltimore. Traveling along the National Road, livestock and other agricultural commodities were transported to eastern markets. Homesteads, taverns, and drove yards were founded at regular intervals along the corridor.

The Blocher-Klotz Farm is one such homestead developed along the National Road. The farm is situated on a tract of land known in its early history as The Grove. In December of 1886 Charles Turner sold 98 acres of land to William, Thomas, Sarah, Charles and Lena Frost for eight hundred and eight-two dollars. In 1903, J.S. and Miriam Broadwater, Sarah Frost, and Jenny and Eugene Weaver sold 50 acres of the land to Charles Frost. In 1970, after the death of William H. Turner, Sara Blocher and Laura Klotz, Turner's heirs, took possession of a parcel of land larger than 350 acres of which the Grove was part. This property was vested to Charles H. Turner, Sara Blocher and Laura Klotz under the terms of the Last Will and Testament of their father William L. Turner. Land records do not indicate how William L. Turner came into possession of the property.

Donna Shulte, one of the current owners of the property, states that Tom and Sarah Frost built the home in 1908. The October 9, 1930 obituary for Miriam Broadwater identifies her as the wife of James S. Broadwater, the daughter of William and Sarah Frost, and granddaughter of Meshach Frost, founder of Frostburg. The obituary goes on to say that the Broadwater home was known for its hospitality.

The Blocher-Klotz Farm is a good example of a late nineteenth farmhouse in Garrett County. The Italianate style has been identified in several other properties along the National Road. (See G-I-A-112 and G-I-A-005) The frame house has a stone foundation in an L-plan with a cross-gable roof. The house has two full stories plus an attic and a cellar. It measures five bays by four bays. The Blocher-Klotz Farm retains sufficient integrity to ensure its historic significance.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The building is located on the south side of U.S. Route 40 (National Road) about .9 miles west of Green Lantern Road in northeastern Garrett County. The house sets back a few feet from the road and on the side of a hill that slopes downward in a southerly direction. The facade of the house faces north.

The house, built probably in the mid-nineteenth century, is a two and a half story, frame structure with a stone foundation and a cross-gable on the facade. The main portion of the building is rectangular in shape with five bays across the front (north side) and two bays along the sides. A two and a half story, frame wing abuts the main portion on the westerly end of the back (south side). The exterior is covered with clapboards. The three end gables have returns. The cornice and the areas under the eaves are ornamented with brackets. The south walls of the wing and the main portion are blank and show no signs of openings in them. There are two internal, end chimneys of brick piercing the ridge of the roof.

The original windows are double-hung wooden sash with two-over-two lights. The windows of the first and second floors have interior shutters. The window in each of the three gables of the main portion have round tops. The east wall of the wing has two modern casement windows.

Attached to the facade is a one story, frame porch with masonry under supports. The porch is one bay wide and three bays long and covers the under door and one window to each side. The capitals of the posts are composed of bracket-like forms. The balusters of the balustrade are pieces of scroll work. A porch and balcony with scroll-work balusters is attached to the east side of the wing. There are signs that indicate that the porch and balcony originally ran the full length of the wing. Presently, about two-thirds of this length is enclosed.

One of the present owners says that the rooms are arranged around a center hall.

The basic structure of the building remains intact. The house, now occupied by tenants, appears to be in fairly original condition.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The tenant house on the Blocker-Klotz farm is important architecturally as an example of a rural expression of the Italinate style as found in Garrett County. Several buildings of this type form a significant architectural group along U. S. Route 40 in the northern part of the county. The houses have several common characteristics: frame construction, a cross-gable on the facade, clapboard siding, and long, narrow windows. The majority of the examples of mid to late nineteenth century domestic architecture found along the National Road are in the Italinate mode. Another house of this style is located on the farm about .1 miles west on the north side of U. S. Route 40. The second house is the subject of form number G-I-005.

The exact date of construction for this house is unknown. Based on general stylistic features, it appears to date from the mid-nineteenth century. On the National scene, the Italinate was popular in the mid-nineteenth century. Unfortunately, there are no substantiated dates of construction for this group of houses along the National Road.

The Blocker-Klotz farm is comprised of about 300 acres and has been owned by this family since about 1894. It is part of a large tract that was owned by Jesse Tomlinson in the early years of the nineteenth century.
